"They are laying tile right now, and as soon as a classroom becomes available, it is going to be set up for the coming school year," Mullins said.

Mullins said that school officials are hoping that they can get a certifi-cate of occupancy from the state around the first of August, which would allow students to enter the building.

"If we have classrooms, bathrooms and the cafeteria ready, we shouldn't have any problem getting what we need from the state," he

"There will no doubt be some small items still not finished when school starts, but it shouldn't present any problem," he said.

The new facility will have 28 classrooms, a gymnasium, cafeteria, media center and administrative offices.

Currently approximately 400 students attend the school.

Much of the equipment and fur-niture in the old school building will be used in the new facility.

Mullins said that the majority of those things are being stored in a warehouse on the Taylor's Produce
