Livingston Mayor resigns, is now police officer

Former Livingston Mayor Charlie Newcomb resigned his position, late in February and was apparently hired as a part-time police officer. However, newly appointed Mayor Catto McHargue said that Newcomb must undergo training before he will be allowed to carry a gun and continue to work. McHargue said that he was currently trying to complete the proper paperwork for Newcomb, who will join for Johnson on Livingston's police force when he receives his certification. McHargue said that Newcomb would be a part-time officer.

McHargue said that he is also trying to find someone to fill the spot left vacant on the council when he look the Mayor's job. Right now, Told Mink, Kathy Carpenter and Jason Medley serve along with McHargue.
