Something To Think About

ROY MARTIN

DIRECTOR

IMPORTANCE OF PLANNING

Often one works for a lifetime, makes countless sacrifices, and does a great deal of planning in order to provide financial security for one's heirs. On the other hand, often too little time and thought is spent on other consideration involving one's survivors.

What should be done in the event of one's death is of primary importance. It is a difficult enough time for spouse and close relatives without having to make decisions regarding your wishes—particularly if these have never been expressed. Discuss the subject openly and, better yet, include your wishes in written form (called Letter of Instruction).

Plan ahead concerning other matters. Should the survivor stay where he or she is and live alone? Would it be better to move in with grown children, another relative, a friend, a retirement community? Unless this type of question is explored and answered, one has not fully provided for one's survivors.
