In Loving Memory

In Memory of my niece,
Elizabeth Collins Napier,
who passed away in May
Written By Lora Westerfield

She was the apple of my eye.
She was my sister's child.

Obituaries courtesy of local funeral homes

She was shining bright.
She was so young.
I know on that great judgement morning, her name will be called.
Her face will be so beautiful standing there by her Master.

She will enter the mansion with her family and Christ by her side.
She was 61.
But her soul is now resting in the arms of Jesus.

Oh, how she could sing.
She could make the whole heaven ring.
I know her family is very sad.
But all her family will get together and have a wonderful time.

The parting was sad, but the reunion will be happy.

Something To Think About

DIRECTOR

A CHILD'S TEARS

Often, children attend the funeral of a loved one without any obvious demonstration of emotion. The child stands there stiffly, dry-eyed. The child is probably neither being brave nor unfeeling; rather, the child is probably too stunned or uncomprehending to fully express his or her feelings.

Sometimes, the child gets a subtle, or not so subtle message from adults to keep a lid on emotions. Psychologists generally agree that this is wrong, that it is unhealthy for the child to bottle up grief. The youngster who stoically represses his or her feelings may later find a release in an explosion more dangerous to psychological well-being.

Adults are advised by psychologists not to fear the allowing or even causing of tears. There is not reason to steer conversation away from the deceased for fear of starting the tears to flow. Expressing grief through crying is both normal and therapeutic. A child's tears are a fitting and tender tribute that should not be stifled.
