Something To Think About

ROY MARTIN

DIRECTOR

SPARING THE SURVIVORS

Sometimes people make arrangements which cause distress to their family. This is often the case when, after a sudden death, it is unexpectedly revealed that the decedent made plans, for example, to have his body donated to a medical school or cremated.

It is of utmost importance that we - the living and healthy - make our wishes known to our families (and lawyers) and that we all have a last Will prepared before illness or death occurs. In this way, the family will have an opportunity to express their views and objections they might have, at a time when they are not emotionally distraught. A change of plans might, or might not, be effected, but at least the family will be apprised of our plans and have a chance to accept them.

In this regard, it would be considered prudent to select a funeral home ahead of time and discuss these arrangements with the funeral director.
