Day's sister, Angela, was driving the Ford Ranger, in the bottom photo, which was totaled in the single vehicle accident. Lindsay was treated and released at Rockcastle Hospital and Angela was not injured.

Dale, have three school age children.

Steve Owens, 55, of Mareburg, has filed for the school board seat in Division three. He is a retired Chief Bank Examiner for the State of Kentucky.

That seat is currently held by board chairman Dr. G.W. Griffith, but Griffith announced a few weeks ago that he would not seek re-election. He served on the board for ten years.

Division three is composed of the precincts, North Mt. Vernon, West Mt. Vernon and Bullock.

There will also be two magistrate races and a constable's race this fall. Two term third district incumbent Republican Billy McKinney faces opposition from Democrat James "Bear" Bradley.

Four years ago, McKinney defeated Bradley by just 13 votes.

The third district is composed of Brown, West Brodhead and Bullock.

Two term incumbent Democrat, John

Holbrook faces opposition from Republican challenger David Gibbs, a Mt. Vernon businessman, in district one. District one is comprised of North Mt. Vernon and North Brodhead precincts.

The only other filing for council positions to date has been in Livingston, where incumbent council member Todd Mink has filed for re-election.

Statewide, incumbent Republican U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell is seeking a fourth term. He faces opposition from Lois Combs Weinberg, the daughter of former Kentucky Governor Bert Combs.

One of the most powerful men in Congress, U.S. Representative Harold Rogers of Somerset, a Republican, has no opposition.

Mrs. Hook said that a new state law will require anyone wishing to run as a write-in candidate to file papers in her office by October 25th.

"Candidates must file a Statement of Intent in my office before their votes can be counted," she said. There is no filing fee and no signatures are required, according to the clerk.

in the backcountry area of the park.

Our last stop in Yellowstone was to me the most impressive. The Lower Falls of the Yellowstone River. Absolutely beautiful. I think all of us would have liked to stay and hiked along the river. However, as usual, we had other places to go.

We headed back toward Cody, to spend another night in the same campground where we were in the night before. This officially marks our turnaround point. Everywhere we go now is on the way back home. Personally, I have mixed feelings. I'm tired, and would like some rest and quiet time, but we have the best group I've ever seen to travel with. We have the gear and can always restock food and fuel. Wood's it be nice to be on into Idaho, Colorado and Utah before heading home? But we don't. Instead, we head on toward Cody. We arrive back at our campsite after dark, where the KP's fix stew for supper.

Another night under the stars. Life sure is tough... (right).

July 14 - July 10, 2002
Depart Buffalo Bill State Park, heading back to the Big Horn Mountains.

After breakfast, we head into Cody. On the way though, we stop to tour the Buffalo Bill Dam. Justin acts as our unofficial "dam" tour guide. It's funny at the time, but his mother will probably wash his mouth out with soap when she sees (hear) the video. Actually, soap and water would be welcome right now by all. Wash bowl baths just don't feel the same as a shower. The actual visitor's center at the dam is interesting and everyone seemed to enjoy it.

After restocking and refueling in Cody, Ms. Jenny becomes everyone's hero. She negotiates a real live shower for everyone at a nearby campground. It's been eight days since the shower at the water park in Rapid City. After cleaning up, you can't shut anybody up. Now to take care of another necessity, laundry.

After doing laundry, and eating lunch at a Subway, we headed into town to get an "old time photo" taken. The people in the shop had never worked with such a large group, so it took longer than we expected. They also couldn't understand why the background couldn't be the saloon they normally used. Since Jenny and I wanted to keep our jobs in the school system though, we made them understand.

After the photo was finally taken, the kids toured the town in their groups before meeting back at the bus. Jacob found a cowboy to show him how to use the lasso he picked up in Wall. I've got a feeling that Derrick and Erik are in for a busy time, acting as practice steers.

We finally get on the road again, heading out across the desert. This is really desolate country. Beautiful in its own unique way, it's still big, dry and empty. According to the Colonel at the Little Big Horn, this is where the tribes retreated to after defeating Custer. How in the world they survived here I'll never understand.

We finally stopped at a lakeside campground up in the mountains. Surprisingly, the campground is full, so we set up in the day use area. It's much better than the camping area. While the KP's cook hamburgers over a charcoal fire, the other group sets up the tents for the night.

Great supper. We turn in for the night in tents for once instead of under the stars.
