Just some thoughts

Richard Anderkin
Editor
Mount Vernon Signal

Just some random thoughts.
Saddam Hussein is apparently a leader whom the Bush Administration thinks is a danger to the world. President Bush and Vice President Cheney continue to make it very clear that Saddam has to go, even though they have taken some harsh criticism from the United States' so-called allies, members of Congress and supporters inside their own party.

Hussein obviously has the ability to cause mass destruction in the world, and, after September 11th, the Bush Administration must not be willing to take any chances with him. You have to admire the stance they have taken on the matter - because it could cost Bush the next election if things don't go well when they decide to make their move.

A lot of people will say that if Bush makes a move on Hussein that it is politically motivated, but from all indications at this point it isn't going to help his popularity any. That only tells me one thing: Bush, Cheney and their advisors are more worried about doing what they think is the best thing for the entire world, than they are of being re-elected to the White House.

It probably has helped Kentucky state government for one legislative body to be controlled by the Democrats and the other by the Republicans, but it certainly hasn't helped the state to not have a state budget.

State Senator David Williams, a republican and President of the Senate, is apparently an egomaniac, who thinks he has as much power as Governor Paul Patton.

He and Governor Patton have never seen eye to eye and there wasn't a budget compromise for the first time in the history of the Commonwealth of Kentucky when the legislative session adjourned this Spring.

Williams and many of the Republicans are against public funding for gubernatorial elections and they say that is the main reason they wouldn't go along with the proposed budget. Of course Patton has all of the power now and anything they were hoping to get for the people they represent they most likely will not get.

Because there is no state budget, the Governor decides how the money is spent and no special projects can be funded.

Back to funding for the Governor's race. I'm not so sure I'm not for that.

"Rock"

Rock fans got in their exercise As they wended their way around the field. And when they got settled down Their yells would make the devil yield.

Extra Port-A-Potties were brought in For folks who had to go. And it was a blessing to all To help take care of the overflow.

The Royals won the toss And the game got underway. And two hard-nosed, well-coached teams Fought it out on the field to play. The Royals struck in the first quarter With a 10-yard pass and a 17-yard run. And the Rock knew right off That they were under the gun.

In the middle of the second quarter The Rock got back on track. When Marty Reagan scored on a two-yard run. As the Rock struck back. The Royals countered with another score - And took a 19 to 6 lead. But there was no quit in the Rock As they fought back hard indeed.

An interception with 1:21 to go And the Rock was knocking on the door. When Aaron Anderkin hit Stephen Boring - With a 9-yard pass for the score. At halftime the score was 19 to 12 With the Rock on the short end of the score. And that's the way the game would end. As neither team would score any more.

In the second half the defense took over And they thwarted any attempts to score. Although each team had golden opportunities The defenses rose to the occasion once more.

It was a hard fought game With both teams fighting hard. And they really had to work To gain each and every yard.

to enforce the ordinance.

Mayor King said after the meeting that police would patrol the area more and that the ordinance would be strictly enforced.

"People shouldn't have to put up with that and we're going to try and correct the problem as best as we can," he said.

Councilwoman Clarice Kirby also voiced her support for the resident's request, saying the city should do more to help the people in the area.

The council also discussed about ten roads that the city nor the county currently maintain.

Kirby suggested that the city be the necessary paperwork to take the roads into the city's work program.

Kirby then made a motion for the city to get started on the paperwork and the motion passed.

Kirby said that eventually the city would be forced to take over the roads by the state anyway.

chance any longer in the United States because of all of the private money that is spent on elections.

There is nothing wrong with donating to candidates whom you think will do the best job, but in some cases elections are simply won by the people who have the most money."

Their argument would be that if you intend to run for office you should get out and raise enough money to properly finance your campaign, but we all know that many people, not all, expect something in return when they reach into their pockets and "donate" money.

State government wastes a lot of money every year anyway, why not help fund elections where possibly somebody besides the very rich gets elected.

After all the majority of the people are hard working middle class people, who pay their taxes.

It has been a long time, if ever, that a Governor wasn't rich and obligated to the rich people or to corporations who funded his or her campaign.

I know that some of my Republican friends, especially my son, think that I should change my party affiliation, because of my views, but I simply think it would probably be a benefit to the state, if public funding were in place.

was 23 years old, he took great enthusiasm in owning his own business. He has owned and operated the store for 41 years. Bill Martin founded the store in the 1930's. It remains in the same location at the corner of Main and Church Streets in Mount Vernon. Working has helped Hiatt to maintain a good diet and exercise program so he can stay in proper shape, mentally and physically. He thinks he is more alert and younger due to his work schedule of six days a week from 8:30 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., with about an hour and a half for lunch each day. He loves to attend church, garden, read, and carve. He carves practical things like miniature baseball bats, axes, chums, wheelbarrows and bottles.

Hiatt has not seriously thought of retiring. He has the best clerks anywhere to help him in the store. His job is easier due to the clerks. Business is good right now. People come to Hiatt's from many different states. The local people find the store serves them wonderfully, whether for gifts or everyday needs. He finds it refreshing to go to work everyday and meet and greet people.

A successful business comes about by treating everyone fairly, and that is just what Mr. Hiatt has done. When he deals with a customer on a one-to-one basis, the customer comes out with the best deal. He believes you have to work hard to succeed and he has taken care of his business in a professional manner. He has worked diligently to do this. He turns to the Lord for guidance many times during the day. Faith plays a big part in his success. He still attends the church in Wildie where he attended as a boy.

Although, 73 years old, Hiatt thinks older workers have to be unselfish with their time. They should stay active with exercise and proper diet. They should enjoy what they are doing. They need to find something useful to do and keep busy. The most purposeful thing in life is to serve others.
