of the sightseeing happened on the way to and from presentation sites. Although Mattingly did say the group ate at nice, authentic Chinese restaurants. Nonetheless, Mattingly said he still tried to abide by the Chinese customs.

“I used chopsticks every meal I was over there because I thought it was the respectful thing to do,” Mattingly said. “It wasn’t so much that I had to adapt to anything, but their culture and the way they show respect to somebody.”

Mattingly used an example of the ways they show respect by stating that they saw him as “the expert” because he was there presenting. He said it was hard for them to ask questions because they believe it looks disrespectful and as if they weren’t paying attention. Mattingly said this made it somewhat difficult on his presentation because he was never sure if they were “getting” what he was saying. But overall he made it clear that they were very intelligent and eager to learn.

“They were all super nice, and sometimes we don’t think about this, but the world is full of good people,” Mattingly said. “It’s just the governments sometimes get in the way, but there are lots of good people.”

Mattingly spoke of his experience, doing what he loves overseas, with great pride and often said how he hopes there will be more opportunities to go out of country again though he hopes it’s not during the school year because he said though it was an amazing opportunity, he missed his students and hated not being able to be there. He did end the interview with an excellent point, and wise words that not only his students, but students from across the county can learn from, “This kind of work makes me a better teacher and keeps me at the forefront of what’s going on. And the best part about it is it shows my kids, (or I hope I can convey this to my students), that you can do anything you want to do,” Mattingly said. “If a guy like me from rural Kentucky gets to do something like go and work with teachers from another country, you can do anything you want to do if you put your mind to it.”

the defense’s cases throughout the trial and that he believed Robinson played an integral part in the murder.

“I believed based on your intelligence that you not only played an important role in the murder but that you were the material instigator in the murder,” Burdette said. “You were an intelligent motivator in the crime and most of that was the result of the manufacturing of meth in which you also played an integral part.”

Burdette went on to sentence Robinson to 26 years in prison. He said she will have to serve 85% of her sentence before she will be eligible for parole.

Robinson’s sentence came as a result of the December 2011 incident that resulted in the shooting death of Bullock. According to the Rockcastle County Sheriff’s Department, Bullock was at a home on Lone Oak Drive on December 1, 2011 before he was murdered. He was later found dead in the driver’s seat of his vehicle, after it had rolled approximately 300 yards down a hill off Lone Oak Road near the residence where he was last seen.

Deputy Sheriff Matt Bryant, who was in charge of the vehicle accident investigation, later determined that Bullock’s death was a homicide after discovering a gunshot wound in his side.

In December of 2011, Bryant arrested and charged Mt. Vernon residents Gary Lee Kirby, 19, Joshua Duane Cameron, 25 and Bobby Peters, 36 with the murder of Bullock. After further investigation, Bryant arrested Mary Hannah Hunsucker, 24 of Mt. Vernon and charged her with murder as well. Robinson was later arrested on an warrant after she was indicted by a grand jury.

Upon further investigation, Bryant determined that all five people allegedly murdered Bullock during an attempted robbery of his prescription medication. Bryant also found a meth lab at Peters’ home during the investigation.

Kirby, Cameron, Peters and Hunsucker all pled guilty to murdering Bullock, during their respective trials in 2012. Hunsucker was sentenced to 20 years in prison while Kirby, Cameron and Peters were sentenced to 25 years in prison, due to separate charges for manufacturing methamphetamine. However, Robinson pled not guilty to the charges of murder, first degree robbery and manufacturing methamphetamine during her court appearances in 2012.

Robinson currently remains lodged in the Rockcastle County Detention Center without bond. Officials said she will remain lodged at RCDC until the Kentucky Department of Corrections can evaluate her and select a prison where she will serve her sentence.

the hill to the tower, they noticed that the lock to the tower’s gate had been removed and that another section of the fence had been cut. They also noticed that several copper wires had been removed and eight copper plates were missing from the tower.

While searching the area around the tower, officers found four of the copper plates and three pieces of copper wire lying beside the driveway that led up to the tower.

Upon further investigation, officers found Morrow in the wooded area near the tower. He told officers that he was mushroom hunting. Officers also found a climbing harness, roll of duct tape and ratchet/socket set lying near a tree in the woods where they found Morrow.

After the incident, Officers learned that the cell phone tower was operated and maintained jointly by Kentucky Utilities, Sprint Corporation, Verizon Wireless and AT&T Inc. An AT&T employee later told officers that it would cost approximately $2,500 to fix the damage.

Morrow is charged with first degree criminal mischief, second degree criminal trespassing and theft by unlawful taking. He remains lodged in the Rockcastle County Detention Center on a $7,500 10% bond.

“Play”

work. The goal of the program is to provide a space where toddlers can play with others in a safe and fun environment. The target opening date for at least one location is January 1, 2014.

The Development Board applied for an ARC grant to create the program and to purchase start-up fixtures and play items.

The committee, consisting of mostly mothers with young children, recently met to discuss the content of the program manual. EKV child development speaker Carol Patrick spoke to the group last week and a field trip is planned September 14th to tour the Lexington Children’s Museum.

Anyone interested in participating in the development of the program, remodeling of the space or volunteering your time when the program starts up, please contact Lynn Tatum of the Rockcastle County Development Board at 606-308-4646.
